Bahir Dar City is one of the biggest cities in Ethiopia and it serves as the capital city of Amhara National Regional State. It is located in 566 km North of Addis Ababa, the country’s main capital city. According to the Regional Bureau of Finance and Economic Development (BoFED), the total population of the town is estimated to be 219,535 (105,652 male and 113,883 female). The average altitude and temperature of the city is 1801 masl and 20 degree centigrade, respectively. Unlike most of the topography of the northern part of the country, Bahir Dar town is plain. The city is bordered by the largest lake in the country, Lake Tana which serves as natural air conditioner for the city. The city is also the source of one of the largest river in the world, Blue Nile. The city is one of the major tourist destinations in Ethiopia, which comprise both historical and natural attractions. Moreover, as it is the capital city of Amhara Region, Bahir Dar town is a nucleus area for many people from different directions in search of better living condition, further education and employment. However, because of the ever-escalating price of living condition and other factors in the city, many young girls and women are forced to join commercial sex work to subsist their daily life. Besides, economically disadvantaged sections of the community like women, youth and children are highly vulnerable to social crisis most importantly, the effects of HIV/AIDS.

With regard to social services, the town has one referral Hospital, five Health Centers, one University, one Business Administration Institute, one Technique and Vocational Education and Training Center and an Airport. The city is one of the major tourist destinations in Ethiopia, which comprise both historical and natural attractions.
The City of Bahir Dar has numerous socio-economic problems such as unemployment, poor social services and social ills. These make the town to be incompatible with the booming population that is hungry for these services. Young population is becoming dominant population group in the town. This group is also the most affected group of society by the above stated socio-economic constraints. The young sect of society in the city is alarmingly increasing from time to time due to high rural influx to urban population, strategic location of the city or town and the presence of government institutions in search of better life, education and other services. The accessibility of the town has resulted in high mobility of population from different directions to Bahir Dar City where these all resulted in high unemployment and juvenile delinquency.

On top of this, since the city is the capital of Amhara Region it is a nucleus area for many people from different directions in search of better living condition, further education and employment. Especially women are more prone to migration to the towns owing to rural – urban push factors as well as due to romanticizing of the urban life by themselves and by the false propaganda of illegal brokers who are involved in children and women trafficking. Nevertheless, because of the ever-escalating price of living condition and other factors they often fail to realize the dreams they had had. However, as a result of wide spread unemployment and poor living condition many young girls and women are forced to join to be a commercial sex workers to subsist their daily life.
Due to overpopulation of the city socio-economic problems are prevailed in unmanageable way that really threatens the well being of the residents. Social Evils such as prostitution, theft, streets children, excessive drinking are some of the ill effects of urbanization, which are visible in cities like Bahir Dar. Very often, economically disadvantaged section of the community like women and children are highly vulnerable to social vices. Most importantly, the effects of HIV/AIDS worsen their living condition from bad to worst.

According to data gathered and compiled by Bahir Dar Administration Women, Children and Youths Office (March, 2011), in just 9 kebele Administrations, there are about 2,363 Orphan and vulnerable children. These orphans and vulnerable children are found under difficult circumstances and are in acute need of care and support by development actors.
Due to the prevalence of HIV/AIDS, poverty and rising unemployment in the country, the vulnerability of children is increasing. HIV/AIDS significantly increased the already staggering number of orphans in the country. Due to the combined effect of poverty and AIDS, more than 5.4 million children under the age of 18 years were orphaned, out of which 855,720 (16%) lost at least one parent due to AIDS. Most of these orphans are in desperate need of economic, social and psychological help to cope with the trauma and become self-supporting and productive citizens.

A vulnerable child is defined as a young person less than 18 years living in poverty or being at risk of falling into poverty, due to circumstances such as homelessness, orphaned, displaced family, living on the street, sexually or physically abused, deprived of access to property, education and health care. The efforts of the government, donors, and NGOs to improve the status of children have been undermined by the emergent problems of HIV/AIDS and poverty. The existence of orphans, which was not a problem in the past, has become critical because of the disintegration of the family and community structures that ensured that they are well looked after.
Because HIV/AIDS predominantly attacks people of childbearing age, the impact this is having on children, extended families, and communities is devastating. Studies show that if a parent dies of AIDS, the child is three times more likely to die, even though he or she is HIV negative. Besides increased risk of death, children whose parents have died due to HIV/AIDS also face stigmatization and often suffer from emotional distress, malnutrition, a lack of health care, poor or no access to education, and most importantly, a lack of love and care. They are also at high risk of labor exploitation, sex trafficking, homelessness, and exposure to HIV.

Extended families and communities in highly affected areas are often hard-pressed to care for all the children. In a communities hard hit by the double sword of HIV/AIDS & Poverty, there are millions of children who are not orphans, but become more vulnerable by HIV/AIDS. For example, children whose parents are infected with HIV/AIDS might not receive the care and support they require, and may instead become their parents’ care givers, often dropping out of school & becoming the breadwinner.

HIV/AIDS has now become a serious problem to socio economic development of the region. The pandemic claims the lives of hundreds of thousands of productive citizens leaving hundreds of thousands of orphans and helpless elderly people behind. In Amhara region, the adult HIV prevalence rate is 9.9% urban and 1.5% in rural areas.
These orphan children are often subjected to various forms of abuse since they lost their beloved parents at their early age. The emotional upheaval of seeing a dying parent may leave children feeling abandoned and increase their susceptibility to sexual abuse. They also do not get the love and care they deserve at this stage. As a result of these, children’s healthy life is distorted and exposed to physical, physiological, psychological & social problem.

When orphans cannot stay with their family and communities, for various reasons, their chance to go to school is very minimal. Orphaned children, including children in households with a parent ill due to HIV/ AIDS or related illness, may find their education cut short and future economic opportunities compromised. Children whose families are HIV positive are more likely to dropout from schools than children from non-affected households due to factors including family’s inability to afford the school costs, need the children to help supplement household income; and the need to help care for sick parents. These trends are especially evident in countries with high HIV/ AIDS rates and where school fees and costs are relatively high for low income groups. Then, children are forced by parents or foster parents to work to supplement household incomes. Many of these children wind up in the worst forms of child labor. Most working orphans complained of a whole complex of problems, among them going without food, forced initiation to commercial sex work, and failure to receive wages.
The other impact of HIV/AIDS is that it has left many children without any adult family member to take care of them. Child-headed households exist because no relatives are left to care for the children, or else the surviving relatives are already too burdened to adequately care for the children they have inherited. These cause social disruption and limit the children’s proper socialization process.

Most people caring for children orphaned by HIV/AIDS were over 50 years of age. Of those, over 70 per cent were 60 years or older. The stress of care giving is clear. Caregivers report regular concerns about adequate food and clothing, the high cost of medical fees, and inability to pay school fees for orphans. Indeed, the health of the older caregivers had deteriorated as a result of the physical and emotional stress of assisting the children. As it was seen from our projects, some children wind up still becoming the caregivers to older parents.

It is this problem and its complexity and an understanding of those children are the future of this country that initiate the organization to engage with this problem and come up with the project.

Activities - Specific Objective 1: Increasing Access of Orphan and Vulnerable Children to Basic Needs

Description of Activities/Intervention Areas

Specific objective 1: Increasing access of orphan and vulnerable children to basic needs

Strategies

1. Selection of beneficiaries

In Ethiopia, an orphan is defined as a child who is under 18 years old and who has lost one or both parents, regardless of the cause of the loss. A vulnerable child is on the other hand defined as a child who is under 18 years of age and whose survival, care, protection or development might have been jeopardized due to a particular condition, and who is found in a situation that precludes the fulfillment of his or her rights.

Therefore, a child who lost one or both parents, whose parent(s) is/are terminally ill and can no longer support the child, children living on or in the streets and a child exposed to different forms of abuse and violence. Besides, school aged children who are under such circumstances will be more prioritized.

GAFÉIAS will employ a participatory approach where the community members, local government offices, and the project staff will be involved during beneficiary selection.
Activities - Specific Objective 1: Increasing access of orphan and vulnerable children to basic needs

Efforts will be exerted to reach the most vulnerable orphans and their guardians. Accordingly, a joint OVC task force comprising of different government sector offices, community representatives, CBOs and project staffs will take the responsibility of recruiting new children. The newly set up community based association called Timeret, which is responsible for assessing community resource to solve problems within the community, will be a great asset to the project. We will also work closely with community association like Idir and the like. The project staff and co-signatory government office will set the criteria for selection.

2. Provision of food allowance
Nutrition is very important for everyone, but it is especially important for children because it is directly linked to all aspects of their growth and development; factors which will have direct ties to their level of health as adults. The project will provide children with 400 birr per month to assist the nutrition status of children so as they have a better health.
Activities - Specific Objective 1: Increasing Access of Orphan and Vulnerable Children to Basic Needs

3. Cloth expense
It is important that children feel confident and believe they are as equal as other children. When children don’t have proper cloth, they feel ashamed and don’t want to play and be with other kids. Therefore the support for cloth will give them confidence and self-worth and also for their physical health. The project will purchase cloth and shoes twice in a year.

4. Personal hygiene and sanitation
Children need to keep their personal hygiene so that they are healthy and will be able to be with other children. This support is meant to buy cleaning material for their cloth and their body.

5. Psychosocial and counseling support
Children who lost their dear parents face a lot of psychological problems. Let alone all the other problems, the emotional upheaval of seeing a dying parent alone is a great burden to children. To tackle socio-psychological challenge that the child and his family/caregivers face, the project will device a home-to-home visiting system. There will be 15 voluntary home visitors who will get training on basic childcare and counseling techniques. These voluntary home visitors will each have 10 children, which they are responsible for.
They will visit at least twice in a month to each home. There will also be a social health worker who would go to families especially who need more attention. The purpose of the home visiting is to assure that supports are used properly, children are behaving well and to investigate and tackle any problems that arise in the family. The home visiting includes the following things:

- Checking the sanitation and nutrition of the children
- Checking the school performance of the children
- Checking the relationship of the child with their guardians and with surrounding community
- Checking their health status and referring them to go to hospital

6. Medical Support

The children and their certified guardian or caregivers will be provided with medical support when they are sick and come with a valid gov’t hospital receipt. The medical support given to the guardians is as important as it is given to the children because prolonging the life of the guardian/caregivers provides comfort the children that there is someone to take care of them.
Specific Objective 1: Increasing access of orphan and vulnerable children to basic needs

7. Educational material and tutorial support
Children have the right for education and the goal of the project is to help children become self-supporting by providing the basic need that are important for any child to grow healthy physically and mentally and by providing educational possibilities. The project provides support for educational material and uniform. It also provide a tutorial class support to help children to be better at school and encourage them by rewarding those who score good grades at their respective classes.

2. Vocational training and startup capital for young family members
Some children may find their education cut short and future economic opportunities compromised due to factors including family’s inability to afford the school costs, need the children to help supplement household income; and the need to help care for sick parents.
